TERMS AND CONDITIONS

Payment will be in advance unless by special arrangement.

Similarity of Names New rules will apply under sections 69 to 74 of the Companies Act 2006. A name will not be registered under the Companies Act where it is the same as that of an existing company but a similar name may be registered. Another company or individual may object that the name is too like an existing registered name. Such claims may then be taken to the Company Names Tribunal (also known as 'Adjudicator'), who will be based at the UK Intellectual Property Office and could ultimately be taken to the High Court.

Trade Marks. The acceptance of a particular name is not an indication that no trade mark rights exist in it. Applicants are therefore advised in their own interests and to avoid possible future expense and inconvenience to investigate the possibility that others may have trade mark rights in the name, or parts of such names they require. It is advised that the Trade Marks Register of the UK Intellectual Property Office be consulted.

It is agreed that we will not be liable in any manner whatsoever in respect of a name which could not reasonably be foreseen by us at the date of our search of the Companies Registry to be the subject of an objection for any reason whatsoever.

A proposed name cannot be reserved and the registrar can only act upon receipt of the documents. Although every care is taken when echoing the name, it is advised that it is only guaranteed once the certificate of incorporation is issued. Any expenses incurred in the advance printing of business stationery, sign writing etc., in which the proposed name appears are incurred at the client's own risk.
